It has been the kindly attitude of the press that has helped racing to the high plane it now occupies. What if the press turned to and exposed the shams of racing and the evasions of the law?

If it didn't, the suggestion was timely, to gay the least. It is a good thing for the horsemen, of course, and it is a good thing for the millionaires who have a corner in all the good thoroughbreds of the turf so that they may capture these rich stakes.

How About the Public?

How About the Public?

But the question that was asked in this column yesterday still remains unduction of the excessive fee charged for admission to the grand-stand. The price ought to be cut in half at once, and remain so. The plea might be made that the associations could not afford to give such rich stakes and purses. "All right," say the people; "then cut sown the stakes and purses. Purses and stakes were cut down and the public paid the increased admission without a murmur. Racing went on and flourished. Evasions of the intent of the law enabled the associations to collect a revenue from the ring, and they are getting it to-day. With the badges was sent a request that the representative of the paper at the track, who had been quite severe in his criticism of men and things at the course, be not permitted to use the club-house badge. An insuit, pure, simple and premeditated. The newspaper instantly returned the badges. The association promptly returned them with an abject apology and the request that the badges be used as the newspaper deemed fit. English Argument Doesn't Go. HORSES WORK FAST

English Argument Doesn't Go.

But all this has nothing to do with the question of a redution of the excessive admission fee. It is no argument to point out that in England it costs much more to go to the races than in this country.

England is not America. Here racing associations get franchises and privileges from the people and are bound to respect their rights.

The above incidents are related to show that racing authorities are satisated with success, autocratic in their funcied security, and are perhaps willing to echo the words of a famous financier, now dead, who once said "There was another illustrious gentleman who also made a famous remark concerning the public. He said, "You can fool all of the people some of the time, and some of the people all of the ime, but you cannot fool all the people all the time."
